After winning three straight games from the Brooklyn eam the New-York nine yesterday further illustrated he uncertainty of the great National game by being caten by their Brooklyn rivals. It seemed a pity that nich an uninteresting "iep-s.d.d" game should have been the parties of the seemed a pity that nich an uninteresting "iep-s.d.d" game should have been the parties of the seemed a pity that nich an uninteresting "iep-s.d.d". played before such a crued, for the merry turnstiles did not ccase their "click," "click" until they had registered 7.256 people. It was the worst form shown by the New-York team since the nine was rejuvenated several weeks ago, and yesterday's work showed that the reorganization is not yet complete.

The New-York from has been strengthened at second in the New-York from has been strengthened at second and first bases, behind the tat, and in the outheld, but a further strengthening in the latter department must be made. O'Rourke of late has done wielchedly, but his work yesterday showed that the club cannot afford longer to have him on the team. His blundering demoralized the whale team when in the field, and his uselessness at the bat, coupled with similar work by Tiernan, prevented the team from scoring many runs. O'Rourke accompanied the team West last night, but it is doubtful if he returns with it. Doyle was slated to cover left held yesterday, but the it. Griffin sent a fly to left field, and O'Rourke first misjudged the ball, and then he got under it and muffed it, Griffin going to third and Stein scoring. This series of blunders virtually lost the game right there. Coreoran and Ward were sent to first on called balls, g the bases. Brouthers followed with a two-base and Griffin, Corceron and Ward scored. Burns's three-base hit to left field brought home Brouthers. For eight innings the New-Yorks did not get a run, and their friends anticipated to be further humiliated by a shut-out for the first time this season. The Giants, however, railled in the ninth and escaped such a fate by scoring two runs. With one out, Crane reached first on a poor throw by Coreoran, and he went to third on a hit to right field by Fuller. The latter then stole second, and with Crane scored on Burke's hit to right The score was as follows:

A BEAR AS A MUSICIAN.

THE FUN BRUIN GOT OUT OF A BASS DRUM. Summit Level, Penn., Aug. 8 .- "I used to play a summit level, Penn., Aug. 8.—"I used to play a bass drum in a little brass band down in the village six miles from here," said a Sullivan County mountaineer, "and one afternoon in the blackberry season I put my drum in the wagon and started for the village to play at a political meeting in the evening. I was going to pick a pail of berries to sell in the village, so I drove to the head of the guif, ran the wagon to a shady place a few yards from the road and heng the drum on the dead limb of a tree, so as to let the horse feed out of the hind end of the wagon. The berry field was half a mile up the hill behind woods, and I hadn't been picking long before that some boys were fooling with it, and the beating continued so long that I cut a switch and ran down to the woods to make the urchins stop. I stole through the woods as still as I could, and when I got in sight of the rig I had to stop and laugh at the way I'd been fooled.

"A large bear was standing upright in front of the drum and tapping on it with his right paw, as though he had found a plaything that pleased him immensely. I decided to let the amused animal have his fill of fun with the drum, so long as he wasn't doing any damage to it, and I squatted in the bushes and watched him. The bear beat the dram for several seconds, and then he put his paws on it, pressed it against the tree, poked his nose through the strap and worked and wriggied till the strap slipped off of the limb and slid over his head to his neck. That was something

I wasn't expecting, but I still had a desire to see the bear perform, and so I kept quiet in the bushes.
"When the bear saw that he had the drum all to himself, he danced around on his hind feet and beat to be thinking about anything but the drum when he came in contact with the rear end of the horse, and the horse let fly with both feet and kleked the bear on the rump. The blow made him stagger and brought him to his senses in a hurry. He stopped beating the drum, faced about, shorted at the horse, and then went to rubbing his back against the trunk of a tree. All at once he shook his head at the horse and started for the ravine, placing his paws on the ends of the drum, and not trying to thump it.

"I then realized that the bear was going to rule

"I then realized that the bear was going to ruin my drum, and I grabbed a club, headed him off and drove him out to the road. Instead of dashing across the road, the bear backed down it; kept his front toward me and begun to play on the drum again. I ran around and got behind him, intending to cut the strap with my lackknife, but the bear compelled me to face the music by wheeling about every time he saw me circle out of the road. Once I came near getting behind him, but the bear turned like a flash, backed up the road and played away on the drum as though he knew that he was annoying me. After I had tried more than a dozen times to get a slash at the strap, the bear danced from one side of the road to the other and added insult to insult by snorting at me.

"Finally I found a piece of wagen tire in the ditch, and rushing up to the tantalizing brate, I hit him between the eves with it. That was the most foolish thing I could have done, but I was hopping mad, and I didn't stop to consider. The bear dropped on all fours with a grunt the moment I hit him, crushed my drum into a shapeless mass under him, and dashed off toward the lavine, dragging my ruined drum between his legs. As the bear plunged forward he left parts of the drum in the brush, and before I could get to him the strap broke and left the rest of it, and the political meeting down in the village had to get along without a bass drum that night. The bear leoked over his shoulder at me as he went cantering through the woods, and I was mad enough to kill him. "A few days afterward I was teffing the story to a lot of mountain men over at Sundown, and when I had got through, Jeff Roisford accused me of mortally wounding his tame bear Ned. He said that Ned had come home that night with a frightful gash in his forchead, that he wouldn't have sold the bear got the wound if I hadn't told the story, and that Ned died the third day after. The bear had been tampli to perform lots of tricks, and he had taken possession of my drum because it was something new to li

Mrs. Lillie Ives, who at present is an inmate of the Women's Home, at No. 84 Second-ave., tells a most remarkable story about being a samited and robbed in a house in East Thirty-second-st. Three weeks ago, acording to her story, she arrived in New-York from the West and went to a boarding-house uptown. About week ago she decided to seek for cheaper lodgings saw a "furnished rooms" sign and asked permission to see the rooms. She told the woman who let her in that she was not satisfied with the rooms. Just a she was leaving the place she says a man followed her and told her that if she wanted a pleasant room his sister, who lived on the opposite side of the could accommodate her. The number of deaths reported at the Bureau of Vital statistics during the week was 854, a decrease of 327 from the previous week. From The Chicago Herald.

Many stories have been written about mirages and densions, but none have been more interesting and curious than that of the silent City mirage, which makes its appearance near the Factile glacier in Alaska. The discovery of this wonderful mirage was made by the Indians, who would tell of the city which was built in the clouds. The mirage can be seen in the early part of July, from 5 to 6 p. m. It rises from the side of the Paclic glacier. It first appears like a heavy mist, and soon becomes clearer, and one can distinctly see the spectre city, well defined streets and trees, tall spires, large and odd-shaped buildings which appear to be ancient mosques or enthearnles. It is a city which would seem to contain at least 25,000 or 30,000 inhabitants. As yet no one has been able to identity it, although several have claimed to recognize the place. There is no city like it in Alaska, nor in any country about it for thousands of miles. Some claim it is a city in Russia, others say it is a city in England, but none can tell what and where it is. The mirage was given the name of "Silent City," as it appears to one like a dead city; there is nothing that would indicate it is inhabited.

a delight and a charm to thousands who have visited it. That this fine resort, so close to the centre of the city, should succeed is a matter of concern to all who love the heautiful. Of Egypt and the great hallets many have heard, but some do not know of the picture-sque grounds, laid out so artistically, where cool breezes award day and night, when people are sweltering in New-York. Almost anything could succeed at Eldorado. It is so refreshing and delightful and invigorating that people would be satisfied with a show of less magnitude than the great spectacle now running with so much succees.

For this afternoon and evening an elaborate programme has teen prejared. This will add to the popularity of the place, for there are thousands who have never had an opportunity of visiting it and who find Sunday their most available day. The performers engaged are Mile. A NATIONAL CROQUET ASSOCIATION.

From The Boston Journal.

From The Boston Journal.

Games have their disappearance and their revival. We all remember when there were croquet clubs, croquet tournaments, and croquet pamphlets, without number. Did not even the gallant Captaln Mayne Reld write an exhaustive treatise on the subject? And then it went out of fashion, like unto a thing of dress. Yet a few faithful souts have kept the faith, undistarbed by the louder claims of lawn tennis; for it is reported that the National Croquet Association will shortly hold its annual tournament in Norwich, Conn. The reader of this statement is tempted to examine at once the date of his newspaper; but it is surely 1892. A contemporary suggests that it will now be in order to organize national shindly, town-ball, muniblety-peg and bull-pen associations for public appearance in tournaments.

NYACK.-Howard Fonda, assessor of the township tonypoint and a leading Democratic politician of Rockland County, has been held in $2,000 ball for trial at the county sessions, charged with misleading the daughter of Bernard Gallagher, of the same town Gallagher has also begun a civil suit against Fonda for $10,000 for damages for loss of services. Fonda is connected with the firm of Colegate & Co., soap manufacturers, of New York City, and his arrest has caused a sensation in upper Rockland County, where all the parties concerned are well known. Fonda is an aspirant for Assembly and Shrievalty honors, and the scandal will doubtless ruin his chances for the nomination, which would be equivalent to election.

HAD TO RUN THE CEPHEUS ASHORE.

THE EXCURSION STEAMER STRUCK A SUBMERGED OBSTRUCTION, KNOCKING A HOLE IN HER HULL. The Iron steamboat Cepheus was beached near

Coney Island Point on Friday night to prevent her sinking. The Cepheus was on her last trip to Coney Island on Friday night when she struck a submerged obstruction. The shock was so sight that the passengers did not know that an accident had happened. The steamer proceeded to the Iron Pier, where her 300 passengers disembarked. tain Fierce made an investigation and found that the hole was not large, but enough water had come in to fill two of the fourteen water-tight compartments. Captain Pierre thought he would be able to get the steamer back to New-York in safety, and she started for this city. No passengers were taken on board at Coney Island. By the time Norton's Point was reached there were 14 inches of water in the hold, and it was gaining in the fire-room and threatening to put out the farnaces. There was a good, smooth shore nearby, and Captain Fierce decided to beach the Cepheus. He ran her gently upon the shore, where she stayed safe and snug until this morning, when the hole in her bottom was patched up, and tags were sent to pull her off. There is some mystery about the obstruction struck by the Cepheus.

LANGUAGES IN AFRICA.

From The St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Germans are trying to count the languages that are spoken in their new colonial possessions. In Fast Africa they have found fifty languages, in Foga, five or six. These figures do not include a large number of dialects which are almost equivalent in some cases to another language. The Germans have no idea yet how many languages are spoken in their South Sca possessions, but they have thus fare hard at work reducing the languages which are most used to writing, and making dictionaries of them.
